Michael Botticelli

Executive Director, Grayken Center for Addiction Medicine, Boston Medical Center

Michael Botticelli is one of the nation's leading addiction experts, and served as the Director of National Drug Control Policy at the White House under President Obama. He was the first person to hold the position who was also in long-term recovery from a substance use disorder and who came from a public health background. This marks a return to Boston for him, where he previously served as Director of the Bureau of Substance Abuse Services at the Massachusetts Department of Public Health, working closely with many BMC experts and others to extend successful models of care developed at BMC across the state and the nation. He has served in a variety of leadership roles for the National Association of State Alcohol and Drug Abuse Directors. He was a member of the Advisory Committee for the Substance Abuse and Mental Health Services Administration's Center for Substance Abuse Prevention and the National Action Alliance for Suicide Prevention. He has also co-authored many peer-reviewed articles that have significantly contributed to the field. Born in Upstate New York, Mr. Botticelli holds a Bachelor of Arts degree from Siena College and a Master of Education degree from St. Lawrence University.

Why Is It So Hard to get Attention on Prevention? Reflections of a Lifelong Bureaucrat

Michael Botticelli will reflect on his time as Director of the Office of National Drug Control Policy (ONDCP) and Director of the Bureau of Substance Abuse Services at the Massachusetts Department of Public Health as it pertained to substance use prevention. Mr. Botticelli will also talk about his current work as Executive Director of the Grayken Center for Addiction Medicine at the Boston Medical Center.

Frances M. Harding

*Director, Center for Substance Abuse Prevention,
Substance Abuse and Mental Health Services Administration*

Frances M. Harding, recognized as one of the nation's leading experts in the field of alcohol and drug policy, serves as Director of the Center for Substance Abuse Prevention for the Substance Abuse and Mental Health Services Administration. During the nation's opioid crisis, officially declared a public health emergency by the President in October 2017, Director Harding leads SAMHSA's activities for the prevention of prescription drug and opioid misuse including prevention's role within the 21st Century Cures Act, specifically the State Targeted Response (STR) grants and the Comprehensive Addiction and Recovery Act (CARA).

She represents SAMHSA on interagency efforts to prevent underage drinking, prescription drug misuse, and marijuana use among youth and young adults. Under her direction, the Center oversees more than 1,000 prevention grants to states, tribes, and communities.

Director Harding has held numerous national positions, including serving as president of the National Prevention Network, an organization representing the alcohol and drug abuse prevention offices in all 50 states, and as New York State's representative to the Board of Directors for the National Association of State Alcohol and Drug Abuse Directors. In 2004, she became the first non-researcher to receive the prestigious Science to Practice Award from the international Society for Prevention Research.

Prevention – Sustaining Our Focus in a Year of Change

From the opioid crisis to new leadership in the substance abuse field, we've seen big changes at SAMHSA and beyond. Director Harding will give valuable updates on the direction of the Substance Abuse and Mental Health Services Administration, the Center for Substance Abuse Prevention, multiple prevention grants across the country, and the future of the field of prevention.
